Short paragraph describing background and interests not exceeding 200 words	Liam O'Brien, PhD, is an assistant professor at Carleton University in Ottawa, Canada where he is the principle investigator of the Human Building Interaction Lab. The HBI Lab is a group of about 10 diverse researchers (engineers, architects, and a psychologist) who focus on designing and operating buildings considering human factors. Key projects include developing and testing occupant and building-learning controls for offices, incorporating occupant behaviour models into simulation and design, and field studies on occupant behaviour. Prof. O'Brien has published over 40 peer reviewed articles and recently co-edited a book on net-zero energy buildings. He is heavily involved in IEA EBC Annex 66 on occupant behaviour. Prior to his current position, he obtained a PhD in building engineering and two previous degrees in aerospace engineering.
